Public Conversation

There must be a better way!

Conversations on human nature and the possibilities for the world

6.30-9.30pm, Thursday 24th November 2011, Sydney.

$25 entry contributes to fundraising for KIN

Have you ever wondered if there are better ways for humans to live; ways that support creativity, collaboration, respect for ecological limits and human wellbeing?

Perhaps you have been actively exploring these questions yourself for some time?

Would you enjoy attending a 3-hour chat with people who apply multidisciplinary approaches; each comes from a wide variety of backgrounds, cultures, modalities, trainings and experiences.

They will discuss their perspectives of a world that is alive and interconnected.

Together with you, we will explore concepts of human nature, society, intercultural and indigenous wisdoms...and more... through conversation, sharing personal stories and optional experiential activities.

Our hope is that, when each person brings their wisdom, there is an expansion of what is possible and a richer, healthier, more fulfilling life can emerge.

It will be an evening of stimulating thought, conversation and warm welcomes!

About K.I.N.

The Koru International Network (K.I.N.) is a social action initiative whose aim is to ensure the mutual flourishing of human diversity and biodiversity through the revitalization of indigenous worldviews and related perspectives of deep interconnectedness. We are a growing intercultural movement building synergies between groups at international levels whilst grounded in local contexts.

The panel will consist of:

Lewis Williams, Founder and Chair of K.I.N. Lewis is an eco-activist, social innovator community and academic. Born in Aotearoa and of Ngai Te Rangi and Scottish descent her work is with people and organizations to deepen their life-world perspective and to apply this understanding to collective ecological action. She has researched, published and taught on a variety of issues relating to ecological well-being and has worked with a wide range of cultural groups. Formerly an Associate Professor with the Department of Native Studies, University of Saskatchewan, Canada, Lewis is an Executive Board member of the International Society for Human Ecology and the lead author of a soon to be published book "Radical Human Ecology: Indigenous and Intercultural Approaches".

Donald Marmara Donald grew up in Malta where he gradually became aware of the extent of his own and others' emotional and psychological wounding, and how deeply this affected our wellbeing and the way we treat each other & the environment. He spent several years in therapy, healing his own wounding and training with some of the leading pioneers in Somatic Psychotherapy and Structural Dynamics in Europe and America. He also served an 8-year apprenticeship with a Native American teacher.

Claire Dunne Irish-born actress, author, lecturer and broadcaster, Claire is passionate about the value of multiculturalism, receiving the Order of Australia Medal in 1999 for "service to multiculturalism, particularly through the promotion of Celtic culture, and to ethnic broadcasting". She will also bring her experiences of Jung, nature, spirituality and her time with aboriginal Australians.

Kathryn Mc Cabe Kathryn is a facilitator, lecturer and published author in transformative leadership for sustainability. Her work bridges personal wellbeing, systems thinking and change by drawing on her experiences in Social Ecology, Applied Physics, somatic-psychotherapy, drama and education. She often brings her native Irish humour and storytelling to an event!

You will be most welcomed and we hope you can come along.
